New York Sun: Frankly this is a love story, a love story installed sentimen-tal, a flat account of the most bare-faced affection between two young peo-ple of opposite sexes—an affection unelleved by the slightest coquetry, undisturbed by any parental interference and undismayed by the evident fact that marriage will not be possible to either of the pair for years to come.

It is an unusual case in that way, but Miss Margaret is an unusual young lady, especially in affairs of the heart. She is plumply positive in her likes and she is bumply positive in her likes and dislikes, and she expresses sither always unreservedly. She has been known to receive a young man with a coldness which he demanded should be explained. And she explained it simply with: "I don't like your face." In her mother's presence once she walked over to a visitor who had not been introduced to her and sat herself frankly on his knee, smiling the most open admiration. When she was asked to explain her action she replied, "He's nice." Her meeting with Master Bortie was of a piece with that. He was visiting with her next-door neighbor for the summer months, and he came out on the lawn one fateful morning with a sugar stick and a book of pictures when Miss Margaret and her doll were watching the gardener cut the grass. He also watched the gardener, till Miss Margaret, having decided that he was "nice," condescended to relieve his evident curiosity.

watching the gardener cut the grass. He also watched the gardener, till Miss Margaret, having decided that he was "nice," condescended to relieve his evident curiosity.

"He is cutting the grass," she explained sweetly, "and when he has it all cut he waters it and makes it grow again, so that he can gut it again."

Master Bertis looked at the gardener with new wonder. Then he fooked at Miss Margaret. She returned his gaze demurely. It was "love at first sight." Within five minutes they were sitting on the veranda steps, with fielr heads together over, the picture, book, each nibbling a share of the sugar stick. And Miss Margaret's piece was the larger, as was proper. Hetween blies he explained the pictures, referring occasionally to the printed commentary when his memory was at mail.

It must be understood that Master Bertie was a hothouse plagt, He had never seen his bare feet plastered with healthy mud, and he had been taught that the whole duty of a boy was to keep his pretty clothes "arferfully unspotted. Fate had denied him a brother and his parents had denied him a brother and his successful of solitude, his imagination; and it was this astonishing faculty that won the first admiration of Miss Margaret. She discovered that he knew more about the steries in the picture book than the author of them. When there was a castle in the background of an illustration he could "but" exactly in what room of it the princess was immured. He could picture, the ogre, who was her faller, to the very wart on the knob end of his notse, and he described every article of the gold and silver furnishings of the palace with a realistic detail that made Miss Margaret see the ordinary furniture of her own apartment changed, to aliver filligree and cloth of gold.

She was capitylated. She did not hide the fact, and her expressed enthusiasm opened the floodsates of his co con her handkerchief. "Tay have forgotten yours," she said. "So you never have them," the explained.

She thought the matter over. She said: "You can always borrow mine."

That was so delicately put that his masculine obtuseness office overlooked its meaning. It was Misr Margaret's surrender.

It would be tedious to follow the source of their companionship through the two months which subseeded their meeting. Miss Margaret deserted the rough youngsters with which she had romped heretofore for the more congenial company of her new friend. She learned to storm block forts with battalions of delived masblish that were at one moment cavalry and the next cannon balls, to make slease guns of the pithy elderberry bush and the pithy elderberry bush elder bus Master Bertie distinguished himself by climbing up the posts of a side Veranda to call "Good morning" through the window to his Jady before she had arisen; and Miss Margaret at dinner refused to eat stewed corn, a dish of which she was ravenously fond, because he had told her that it had made him ill. When the inserable day came for his departure she gave him the choicest of her handscrehels, worked with Ber monogram in pale blue silk, a picture of herself in her winter turs, and the promise that she would write to him every day. He gave her-no-body but themselves knows what. And her mother still wonders why Miss Margaret turns her left cheek always to the beddime kisses.

With his departure her troubles began. He had not had a photograph to leave behind him. He promised faithfully to send one in his carliest letter. He discovered, on searching through his home, that he had not a picture of himself alone. In the family group he figured inconspleuously. But sometime in the early summer he had gone to a school pient with the members of his class, and he stood notably in the front rank of the thirty-four young people who had been photographed on that excursion. He chose that picture for Miss Margaret, and his vanity had a just punishment.

For, by a rare inisfortune, Master prices are strongly maintained. The sales this week foot up nearly 6,000,000 pounds domestic and less than 500,000 pounds foreign. Of the domestic over 4,500,000 pounds were territory grades, including Oregon and Texas, which wools are yet meeting with most business. For choice lines of fine medium and fine the basis scoured is 50,655c, while for shorter wools the range is down as to quality. Lots of old wools scoured are being cleaned up at 45,643c, or below the scoured cost of the greasy wools. Fine fleece wools are firm, but trade is quiet. Australian fine wools are about cleaned up, and this should help the sale of fine fleeces. Medium fleece wools are firm, but the advance has been much less marked than on the finer wools.

REFLECTIONS OF A BACHELOR

Women are contrary by nature; men

Women are contrary by nature; men by education.

No tragic story is complete in a woman's eyes unless it has a premonition worked in somewhere.

Probably the real germ of a woman's hatred of old bachelors is the fact that they always call a baby "it."

There is nothing on earth so blind as a woman who is in love with a man and who doesn't want to believe that he isn't in love with her.

A beautiful woman never becomes really celebrated among other women till she is believed to have broken the heart of some plain-looking wife.—New York Press.

well held on a moderate volume of business. The course of the stock market during the week has shown evidences of awakened interest and strength. The principal apprehension has been over the future of the money market. All accounts have agreed upon the unusual abundance of funds at all interior centers, but the activity of trade and industry are also unprecedented and the enormous volume of bank clearings throughout the country shows that more money is turned over in profitable employment every week than ever before.

throughout the country shows that more money is turned over in profitable employment every week than ever before.

The question has been whether in moving the crops the usual demand would be made upon easiern centers for money or whether the large funds at interior points would prove ample. This question is not answered definitely yet. Call money in New York has continued pretty firm and developed during the week that many stock exchange houses were resorting to timeloans. This resulted in hardening of the time money rate and there was apprehension that a money squeeze in the call loan department might intervene when demands began to be felt for crop moving purposes. Expect for domestic disquiet in France the outlook for easier money abrond and sterling exchange at New York has shown a sharp decline towards the end of the week.

New York mercantile paper has been reported as selling in Chicago. The money condition in New York is affected by the failure of some new industrial securities to meet expectations. Some of these have declined sharply from the subscription prices or from the prices taken as a basis for distribution of new securities in exchange for those of constituent companies. Money supplied for underwriting has, thus been kept tied up waiting to realize. Not a little of the long continued speculative doubt has been due to the threatened Transvaal trouble with a special view to its probable effect on the gold production of the Rand. The expected large supply of gold from this source is a factor in the estimates of future world prices. The various causes of anxiety, however, have tended towards amelioration during the week. The period of hazard to the crops has come nearer its end. Industrial activity continues unabated, internal trade and rallroad earnings break all records and the export trade is proving itself permanently established at a new high level. The strength of stocks, which developed first in a few obscure and isolated cases, then in the Southwesterns and Louisville and later in the grang
